NSW Health

NSW GOVERNMENT

Pregnancy vaccinations

Vaccines recommended during pregnancy are safe and effective for you and your baby.

After you are vaccinated, your antibodies pass to your unborn baby in the womb. This protects you and them against severe diseases.

Influenza (flu) vaccine

Free for pregnant women*. Have at any stage of every pregnancy.

Respiratory syncytial virus (RSV) vaccine

Free and available for pregnant women*. Recommended at 28 weeks of pregnancy.

Pertussis (whooping cough) vaccine

Free for pregnant women*. Recommended for every pregnancy.

COVID-19 vaccine

Free for pregnant women*. Have at any stage of pregnancy.

*Some providers may charge an administration or consultation fee. Ask your doctor, midwife, or pharmacist if this applies to you.

Speak to your GP, pharmacist or midwife or visit health.nsw.gov.au/pregnancyvaccinations

January 2025 © NSW Health. SHPN (HP NSW) 250085