1 About NSW Health

1.1 Governance and Management of the NSW Public Health System

1.1.1 Key Health Legislation

1.1.1.1 The Health Services Act 1997 is the principal Act regulating the governance and management of the public health system in NSW. The Act establishes the NSW public health system as comprising:

- local health districts;
- statutory health corporations, including board, chief executive and network governed statutory health corporations;
- affiliated health organisations (with respect to their recognised services); and
- the Secretary, NSW Health with respect to ambulance services and other services to support the public health system.

The terms ‘NSW public health system’ and ‘NSW Health’ are used interchangeably throughout this compendium to refer to the NSW public health system as a whole.

Local health districts, statutory health corporations, and affiliated health organisations (with respect to their recognised services) are referred to collectively under the Health Services Act 1997 as public health organisations.

1.1.1.2 The Health Administration Act 1982 sets out the broad roles of the Minister and Secretary, NSW Health in relation to the health portfolio generally.

1.1.2 Role of the Minister for Health

The Minister for Health, is the Health Cluster Minister (the Health Minister) and has powers and functions relating to the public health system under a number of Health acts, including the Health Administration Act 1982, Health Services Act 1997 and the Public Health Act 1991.

Under the Health Services Act 1997, the Health Minister’s role includes:

- appointing the chairs and members of local health district, specialty network and statutory health corporation boards;
- determining the amounts of monies to be paid from consolidated funds to public health organisations;
- fixing scales of fees for hospital services and other health services that are received from public health organisations; and
- determining additional functions for statutory health corporations.

The Health Minister also has powers and functions under the Health Administration Act 1982. These include:

- formulating general policies for the purpose of promoting, protecting, developing, maintaining and improving the health and well-being of the people of New South Wales;
- providing, operating and maintaining health services, as well as, where necessary, improving and extending services; and
- arranging for the construction of any buildings or works necessary for, or in connection with, health services.
1.1.3 Role of the Minister for Mental Health, Minister for Medical Research, Assistant Minister for Health, Minister for Women and Minister for the Prevention of Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault

The Minister for Mental Health, Minister for Medical Research, Assistant Minister for Health, Minister for Women and Minister for the Prevention of Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault has powers and functions relating to the public health system under a number of health acts, including the Centenary Institute of Cancer Medicine and Cell Biology Act 1985; the Garvan Institute of Medical Research Act 1984 and; the Research Involving Human Embryos (New South Wales) Act 2003. The Minister is jointly allocated a number of key Acts with the Minister for Health, including the Mental Health Act 2007, Mental Health Commission Act 2012, and the NSW Institute of Psychiatry Act 1964. The Minister has responsibility for:

- The NSW Mental Health Commission, which includes the Statewide policy for the mental health portfolio;
- Prioritising mental health care and prevention services across NSW;
- Policy and health promotions (other than hospital and out-of-hospital based strategies) that address lifestyle risk factors associated with obesity, drug and alcohol abuse, improve oral health and improve Aboriginal health outcomes;
- Targets and relevant priority actions in the State Plan (NSW 2021) on reducing overweight and obesity rates, reduce risk drinking, Close the gap in Aboriginal infant mortality, improving outcomes in mental health;
- Supporting and harnessing research and innovation to become an industry leader and attract the best and brightest talent in NSW;
- Policy framework that promotes a common understanding of, and response to domestic violence and;
- The NSW Council for Women’s Economic Opportunity (NSW CWEO), as Chairperson. The Council provides specialist advice to the NSW Government on strategies aimed at providing women with greater economic opportunities.

1.1.4 Role of the Secretary, NSW Health

The Secretary, NSW Health has a range of powers and functions under the Health Administration Act 1982, the Health Services Act 1997 and other legislation such as the Public Health Act 1991 and the Government Sector Employment Act 2013.

Under the Health Administration Act 1982, the Secretary, NSW Health powers and functions include:

- to initiate, promote, commission and undertake surveys and investigations into the health needs of the people of New South Wales, the resources of the State available to meet those needs, and
- the methods by which those needs should be met,
- to inquire into the nature, extent and standards of the health services, facilities and personnel required to meet the health needs of the people of New South Wales and to determine the cost of meeting those needs,
- to plan the provision of comprehensive, balanced and co-ordinated health services throughout New South Wales,
• to formulate the programs and methods by which the health needs of the people of New South Wales may be met,
• to undertake, promote and encourage research in relation to any health service,
• to promote and facilitate the provision of the professional, technical or other education or training of any persons employed or to be employed in the provision of any health service.

Under the Health Services Act 1997 the Secretary, NSW Health functions and powers include:

• facilitating the achievement and maintenance of adequate standards of care;
• facilitating the efficient and economic operation of the public health system;
• providing governance, oversight and control of the public health system;
• making recommendations to the Minister as to monies to be paid to public health organisations out of consolidated funds;
• entering into performance agreements with public health organisations and setting performance targets and reporting requirements;
• inquiring into the administration, management and services of public health organisations;
• providing services to support the public health system and enable co-ordinated provision of health services across the State;
• giving directions to local health districts and statutory health corporations to ensure that they meet their statutory and financial obligations; and
• being the employer of staff in the NSW Health Service and Health Executive Service.

1.1.4.1 The Ministry of Health

The Ministry of Health supports Ministers and the Government, undertakes regulatory functions, public health functions (disease surveillance, control and prevention) and public health system manager functions in state-wide planning, purchasing and performance monitoring and support of health services. The Ministry consists of five divisions:

• Strategy and Resources;
• System Purchasing and Performance;
• Population and Public Health;
• Governance, Workforce and Corporate and • Finance.

1.2 Local Health Districts

1.2.1 Local Health Districts

Fifteen Local Health Districts are established as individual statutory corporations under section 17 of the Health Services Act 1997.

Local Health Districts are responsible for managing public hospitals and health institutions and for providing health services to defined geographical areas of the State and their primary purposes under section 9 of the Health Services Act 1997, are to:

- provide relief to sick and injured people through the provision of care and treatment; and
- promote, protect and maintain the health of the community.

1.2.2 Key Functions

The key functions of local health districts under the Health Services Act 1997 reflect these responsibilities and primary purposes. They include:

- to promote, protect and maintain the health of residents of its area
- to conduct and manage public hospitals, health institutions, health services and health support services under its control
- to achieve and maintain adequate standards of patient care and services
- to ensure the efficient and economic operation of its health services and health support services and use of its resources
- to cooperate with other local health districts and the Secretary, NSW Health in relation to the provision of services
- to make available to the public information and advice concerning public health and health services available within its area

1.2.3 Management and accountabilities

Under section 122 of the Health Services Act, the District is subject to the governance, oversight and control of the Secretary, NSW Health.

The Secretary, NSW Health may also determine the role, functions and activities of hospitals and services controlled by a local health district and, for that purpose, give any necessary directions to the local health district.

The Minister may direct a local health district to establish or close a hospital or other health service, or give directions as to the range of services to be provided.

The fifteen local health districts are:

- Central Coast
- Far West
- Hunter New England
- Illawarra Shoalhaven
- Mid North Coast
- Murrumbidgee
- Nepean Blue Mountains
- Northern NSW
- Northern Sydney
- South Eastern Sydney
- South Western Sydney
- Southern NSW
- Sydney
- Western NSW
- Western Sydney

Key functions of local health districts under the Health Services Act 1997
1.2.4 Chief Executives

Each local health district has a chief executive employed by the NSW Government, being appointed by the Secretary, NSW Health under section 116 of the Health Services Act.

The chief executive manages and controls the District in accordance with the relevant legislation, policies and procedures and with the district service performance agreement. The chief executive is accountable to the local health district board for the operations and performance of the local health district.

1.2.5 Further Governance Information

Section 3 of this Compendium sets out the governance relationships applying to local health districts in more detail.

1.3 Statutory Health Corporations

Statutory health corporations (SHC) provide services across the whole State. These services are not limited to defined geographic areas, but are functionally defined through the services they provide.

In relation to board-governed corporations, the Minister may determine the role, functions and activities of hospitals and services controlled by a statutory health corporation. The Secretary, NSW Health has been delegated this function, as well as having a similar function for chief executive governed corporations.

Under the section 41 of the Health Services Act 1997, statutory health corporations may be chief executive governed, board governed or specialty network governed.

- Specialty Network governed statutory health corporations have the same governance arrangements as Local Health Districts including a chief executive who manages and controls the corporation and is accountable to a board in carrying out these functions.
  - The Sydney Children’s Hospitals Network and the Justice Health and Forensic Mental Health Network are specialty network governed statutory health corporations.

- Board governed statutory health corporations have a chief executive who manages the affairs of the corporation, subject to the direction and control of the board. The board is subject to the control and direction of the Minister, except in relation to the content of a recommendation or report to the Minister. This function has been delegated to the Secretary, NSW Health.

- Chief executive governed statutory health corporations are managed and controlled by a chief executive. The chief executive is subject to the control and direction of the Secretary, NSW Health.
  - The Health Education and Training Institute (HETI) is a chief executive governed statutory health corporation.
The following Statutory Health Corporations have been established:

Agency for Clinical Innovation

The Agency for Clinical Innovation (ACI) is a board governed statutory health corporation and works with clinicians, consumers and managers to design and promote better healthcare for NSW.

Clinical Excellence Commission

The Clinical Excellence Commission (CEC) is a board governed statutory health corporation and was established to promote and support improved clinical care, safety and quality across the NSW health system.

Bureau of Health Information

The Bureau of Health Information (BHI) is a board governed statutory health corporation and was established in 2010, to support transparency in health data and allow for greater local control of information analysis.

Health Education and Training Institute

The Health Education and Training Institute (HETI) is a Chief Executive-governed statutory health corporation which coordinates education and training for NSW Health staff. The Institute works closely with local health districts, specialty health networks, other public health organisations and health education and training providers to ensure that world-class education and training resources are available to support the full range of roles across the public health system including patient care, administration and support services.

Cancer Institute NSW

The Cancer Institute NSW (CINSW) was established in July 2003 under the Cancer Institute (NSW) Act 2003 and is deemed to operate as a statutory health corporation under the Health Services Act 1997. It was the first government funded cancer control agency in Australia dedicated to lessening the impact of cancer.

The goal of the Cancer Institute NSW is to eradicate the burden of cancer completely, working in partnership with Government, health practitioners, researchers, cancer advocacy groups, charities and cancer sufferers.

The Cancer Institute NSW also provides a source of expertise on cancer control for the Government, health service providers and medical researchers.

Affiliated Health Organisations

Affiliated health organisations are not-for-profit religious, charitable or other non-government organisations which provide health services and are recognised as part of the public health system under the Health Services Act 1997.

Under section 65 of the Health Services Act, the Minister may determine the role, functions and activities of the recognised establishments and services of affiliated health organisations following consultation with the relevant organisation. This has been delegated to the Secretary, NSW Health.

Not all facilities or services provided by an affiliated health organisation are recognised as part of the public health system. For example, the NSW Benevolent Society conducts some recognised services but also conducts a range of other activities unrelated to the public health system which are not regulated by the Health Services Act 1997.

Where an affiliated health organisation has more than one recognised establishment or service, or provides State-wide or significant services, the Minister may declare them to be treated as a network for the purposes of receiving funding under the now National Health Reform Agreement (NHRA), with the consent of the organisation concerned.

The St Vincent’s Health Network, comprising St Vincent’s Hospital and Sacred Heart Health Service in Darlinghurst and St Joseph’s Hospital at Auburn is the first affiliated health organisation that is recognised as a network under these provisions.

1.7.1 Health Care Complaints Commission

The NSW Health Care Complaints Commission (HCCC) is established under the Health Care Complaints Act 1993. The HCCC is an independent statutory body headed by a Commissioner that:

- receives and deals with complaints concerning the care and treatment provided by health practitioners and health services;
- investigates complaints and takes appropriate action including making recommendations to NSW Health;
- prosecutes cases before disciplinary bodies;
- advises the Minister for Health and others on trends in complaints;
- resolves complaints with parties and provides opportunities and support for people to resolve their complaints and concerns locally; and
- consults with consumers and other key stakeholders.

The Health Care Complaints Commission is subject to the control and direction of the Minister, except in respect of the assessment, investigation and prosecution of a complaint or the terms of any recommendation or report of the Commission including the annual report. Website: www.hccc.nsw.gov.au

1.7.2 Mental Health Review Tribunal

The Mental Health Review Tribunal is a specialist quasi-judicial body established under the Mental Health Act 2007. It has a wide range of powers that enable it to make and review orders and to hear some appeals, about the treatment and care of people with a mental illness. Website: www.mhrt.nsw.gov.au

1.7.3 Health Professional Councils

Since 1 July 2010, health professional registration and accreditation has been undertaken at a national level under the National Registration and Accreditation Scheme, through national health professional boards under the Health Practitioner Regulation National Law.

The National Law covers ten health professions, namely chiropractic, dental, medical, nursing and midwifery, optometry, osteopathy, pharmacy, physiotherapy, podiatry and psychology, with four additional professions, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health practice, Chinese medicine, medical radiation practice and occupational therapy were established in July 2012.

New South Wales applies the National Law differently from other states as complaints, performance and disciplinary processes continue to be managed at the State level. This means the existing “co-regulatory model”, where complaints are dealt with through a health professional body and an independent complaints body (the HCCC), is retained.
As a result, complaints about health professionals who reside in NSW, or have their primary place of practice in NSW, must be referred to the relevant NSW professional council and the HCCC, rather than the national boards. The NSW law establishes the following NSW Health Professional Councils to administer NSW specific complaints and make determinations on performance for the respective professions:

- Chiropractic Council of New South Wales
- Dental Council of New South Wales
- Medical Council of New South Wales
- Nursing and Midwifery Council of New South Wales
- Optometry Council of New South Wales
- Osteopathy Council of New South Wales
- Pharmacy Council of New South Wales
- Physiotherapy Council of New South Wales
- Podiatry Council of New South Wales
- Psychology Council of New South Wales
- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Practice Council of New South Wales
- Medical Radiation Practice Council of New South Wales
- Occupational Therapy Council of New South Wales
- Chinese Medicine Council of New South Wales

These Councils are supported to perform their regulatory and legislative functions under the National Registration and Accreditation Scheme by the Health Professional Councils Authority, an administrative unit of the Health Administration Corporation. Website: www.hpca.nsw.gov.au

NSW Mental Health Commission

The NSW Mental Health Commission was established in July 2012 under the Mental Health Commission Act 2012. The Commission is charged with preparing a draft strategic plan for the mental health system in New South Wales for submission to the Minister for approval. The Commission will also monitor and report on the implementation of the strategic plan and also has a broader role in promoting and facilitating the sharing of knowledge and ideas about mental health issues, undertaking research and advocating for and promoting the prevention of mental illness and early intervention strategies for mental health.

The Mental Health Commission is headed by a Commissioner who is appointed by the Governor. The Commission is subject to the control and direction of the Minister responsible for the Act, being the Minister for Health and the Minister for Mental Health. The Act also makes provision for the appointment of Deputy Commissioners, one of whom must be a person who has or has had a mental illness.

Staff of the Commission are employed under the Government Sector Employment Act 2013 in the Mental Health Commission Division of the Government Service. The Secretary, NSW Health is the Division Head for the Mental Health Division and exercises on behalf of the Government of NSW the employer functions in relation to the members of the staff of the Commission. The terms and conditions of the Mental Health Commission Division are similar to those of the NSW Public Service. Website: nswmentalhealthcommission.com.au
1.8 History of the NSW public health system

1788 The Colonial Medical Services established, essentially as a hospital medical service for convicts.

1841 Convict transportation to NSW ceased and convict hospitals progressively handed over to civilian control. Government exercised little control over the operations, but did provide some financial assistance.

1850s Public health administration commenced, concerned with sanitation and infectious diseases.

1881 The first Board of Health established in response to the smallpox epidemic.

1896 The first Public Health Act introduced.

1901 Establishment of the Commonwealth of Australia, with State Governments responsible for providing health services.

1946 A referendum gives the Commonwealth power to operate a national health scheme for pharmaceutical, sickness and hospital benefits and establish medical and dental services.

1949 The Australian Government begins to provide funds for health to the states through special purpose grants.

1970s The level of Commonwealth financial support increases with arrangements for sharing operating costs of some hospitals and the commencement of the community health program and the school dental scheme.

1972 The NSW Health Commission established, bringing together state psychiatric hospitals, community health services and public health services under the same body responsible for public hospitals. Decentralisation of the administration commences with the creation of regional Commission offices.

1981 General purpose funds for health replace the specific purpose assistance the Commonwealth previously provided.

1982 The NSW Department of Health established under the Health Administration Act.

1984 Medicare introduced, providing insurance against the cost of most private medical services and some optometry and dental services as well as care for patients in public hospitals.

1986 Board governed area health services established in the Sydney, Newcastle and Wollongong areas to administer individual hospitals and health services in their geographic area.

1997 The Health Services Act established the area health services model across all of NSW, and gives statutory recognition to health promotion and education, community health and environmental health services.

2003 Independent Pricing and Regulatory Tribunal (IPART) review of health administration in NSW lead to amalgamation of 17 area health services into 8 and removal of area health boards: Chief executives were made directly accountable to the Secretary, NSW Health for the management of hospitals and health institutions within their areas.

2010 In April, the Council of Australian Governments (COAG) concludes the National Health and Hospitals Network Agreement (NHHNA), which requires establishment of small, locally-based hospital networks to provide public health services in local areas with local governing councils.
2011 In January a new structure of local health networks and governing councils is established to implement the national Agreement.

In July, a revised structure of local health districts and district boards comes into effect. This approach is aimed at improving patient-centred care and better integration with primary care services, and to enhance the role for local decision making and clinician engagement. Under this structure NSW Health now operates with 15 local health districts, 2 specialty networks, and recognises the St Vincent’s Health Network as a AHO-based network for the purposes of federal reforms.

In August, the Council of Australian Governments finalises the National Health Reform Agreement (NHRA), which secured arrangements for funding public hospitals and includes provision for introduction of activity based funding (ABF) from 1 July 2012, as well as arrangements for efficient growth funding for public hospitals from 2014-2015, the administration of the national funding pool and the national performance and accountability framework. The NHRA provides for the Commonwealth to share the funding risk of the demand pressures on public hospitals and provides guaranteed growth funds for public hospitals.

In November, a Governance Review of NSW Health results in further structural reforms with the Department of Health becoming the Ministry of Health, and a range of functions, some previously undertaken by the Department, identified for consolidation into the four pillar organisations (Clinical Excellence Commission, the Agency for Clinical Innovation, the Bureau of Health Information and the Health Education and Training Institute).

2012 Activity Based Funding commenced from 1 July 2012 with Local Health Districts allocated funding using a combination of block funding grants and funding based on patient activity.

In July, the NSW Mental Health Commission was established under the Mental Health Commission Act as an independent body which helps drive reform that benefits people who experience mental illness and their families and carers.

In November, NSW Health Pathology was established as an integrated statewide service to coordinate and deliver safe, technologically advanced and reliable services across our communities.

2013 From 1 July 2013 the proportion of funding to Local Health Districts for Activity Based Funding (ABF) services increased to include sub and non-acute patient (SNAP) services and mental health services.

2014 eHealth NSW was been established as a distinct organisation within the NSW Ministry of Health to provide statewide leadership on the shape, delivery and management of ICT-led healthcare. It is responsible for setting eHealth strategy, policy and standards, and works with Local Health Districts (LHDs) and Health Agencies to implement statewide core systems and ensure compliance with statewide standards.

2015 From 2 April 2015 Women NSW transferred from the Department of Family and Community Services to the Ministry of Health. Women NSW aims to improve the lives of women in NSW by achieving justice and equality for the women of NSW through policy and program development, innovation and collaboration.
