

I CHOSE NOT TO HAVE MY BABY'S HEARING SCREENED. WHAT DO I NEED TO KNOW?

Your baby will be offered a series of health checks in the first few weeks of life. One of these looks for hearing loss.

The hearing screen will be offered as soon as possible after birth and can take place in hospital before or after discharge, or at a local community location.

Parents may refuse to provide consent for their newborn's hearing screening. This will be recorded in your child's Personal Health Record (Blue Book). You will also be asked to sign a form confirming that when the screen was offered you declined.

If you choose not to have your baby screened, you should still be informed about the screen and its importance.

WHY IS THE HEARING SCREEN OFFERED?

About one to two babies out of every 1000 babies born will have a significant hearing loss.

It is important to find out as soon as possible how well your baby hears so that you and your baby can get the correct advice and support.

By the time children say their first word they have been listening to the way we talk for about a year.

If a baby is not hearing well during this time, their speech and language development may be affected.

If you want more information or you change your mind and want to have your baby screened, contact your local SWIS-H program coordinator as soon as possible.

WHAT DO I NEED TO DO AS MY BABY GROWS OLDER?

Hearing may not always remain the same over time. It is important to monitor your baby's speech and language development as well as their responses to sound.

You can refer to the checklist overleaf to monitor your child's progress.

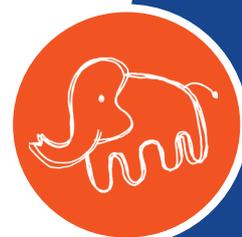

If you are concerned about your child's hearing or speech and language development in the future, please arrange to have your child's hearing tested. Ask your family doctor for a referral to an appropriate service for your child's hearing to be tested.
