

Careers in Midwifery

Experience a dynamic and rewarding career in midwifery. Midwives share the journey from pregnancy to parenthood with women and their families.

Start your midwifery career

There are two pathways to becoming a registered midwife:

- Complete a Bachelor of Midwifery or,
- Registered nurses may complete postgraduate studies in Midwifery.

GradStart is the NSW Health graduate recruitment program for registered midwives who have completed the Bachelor of Midwifery.

MidStart is the career pathway for registered nurses to become midwives. It offers paid employment while postgraduate midwifery studies are completed.

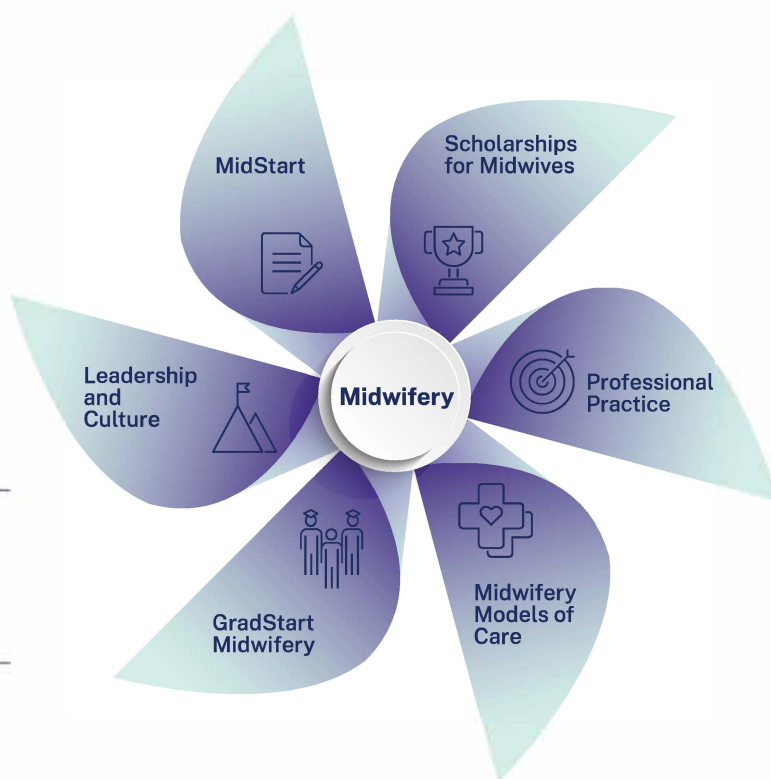

Midwifery means ‘with woman’. Midwives work with women and families, sharing knowledge and experience reciprocally, acknowledging each woman’s unique culture, values and experiences. Midwives practice within many models and settings to care for women and their families at a very significant time in their lives.

Progress your midwifery career

Develop and enrich your midwifery career with support from a range of NSW Health scholarships for postgraduate studies for midwives.

Midwifery models of care

NSW Health promotes multiple models of care to support women, babies and midwives. Midwifery continuity of care models enable midwives to work to their full scope of practice and develop meaningful relationships with the women they care for.

Where can I find more information?

Scan the QR code to find out more.

